Providence Journal Historical Archive Now Covers 1829 to Today

EAST PROVIDENCE, R.I. - Newly available at East Providence Public Library from NewsBank, the Providence Journal Historical Archive covers content from 1829 through today, including the Evening Bulletin (1863-1981). The Providence Journal Historical Archive can be accessed in the library or 24/7 at home for free with a library card via eastprovidencelibrary.org. These new databases can be used to access a range of digitized historical articles, images, and advertisements for genealogy and local history research. The Providence Journal Historical Archive was made possible by the Institute of Museum and Library Services, Rhode Island Office of Library & Information Services, and AskRI.

Design for New East Providence Library

Plans for the building which will house the Watchemoket Free Public Library in East Providence were presented to the Town Council by the library trustees last night. Construction of the building will start soon. Land and funds for the library were bequeathed by Mrs. Sarah S. Anthony and it will be known as the Weaver Memorial Library.
